Dear Church,

It is a common, perhaps daily, experience for many of us, as we live in our technology driven age: a pin drops on a GPS map, marking a current location or indicating a destination, orienting us in space. These map pins represent where we are and where we hope to go.

The scriptures for the special offering this year provide a similar point of reference, an orientation for our lives--God is near; love one another in truth and action; feed those who are hungry, clothe those who are naked, welcome those who are strangers. These texts help us position ourselves in relation to God and to one another by reminding us of our call to be here for one another, loving one another as God has loved us. Our destination, where our map pin sits, is near to the heart of God, is alongside our neighbors who are suffering.

This offering season, our theme is "You are here." By this simple statement, we glorify God’s faithful presence, affirm that Christ is uniquely present in those whom we serve, and celebrate how you are here for your neighbors in their times of need. For over seven decades, Week of Compassion has been able to be present for people near and far in moments of crisis because of your partnership and generosity. We have been present, so you also have been present.

Often we receive notes from those who have experienced disasters, expressing thanks because “Week of Compassion was here.” In times of loss or struggle, after a fire or flood, when a child is unable to attend school because she has to search for clean water, or when a mother has fled home to keep her children safe, the church is present through the work of Week of Compassion. Through your gifts and generosity, you are here.

In grateful partnership, we offer again our thanks and rejoice in the good work of the gospel. As we continue to walk in mutuality, seeking wholeness and healing for all, let us be strengthened by the Spirit of God, here with us.

GRACE AND PEACE,
Your WEEK OF COMPASSION Staff

Rev. Vy Nguyen  Executive Director
Rev. Caroline Hamilton-Arnold  Associate Director
Rev. David Owen  Director of Fund Development

Week of Compassion is the relief, refugee and development mission fund of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in the United States and Canada. We seek to equip and empower disciples to alleviate the suffering of others through disaster response, humanitarian aid, sustainable development and the promotion of mission opportunities.
You have been asked to coordinate this year’s Week of Compassion offering. How might you best prepare your congregation and community for the offering? Scan through this planning and resource guide. Other helpful resources can be found at www.weekofcompassion.org.

The suggested offering date is February 19-26, 2017.

If you do not already have a standing order with Week of Compassion or if you need additional offering materials (bulletin inserts, envelopes, coin boxes, etc.), please go to our website to fill out the form, or contact info@weekofcompassion.org or call 317.713.2442. Once you’ve received the offering materials, give them to the appropriate person(s) (e.g., the bulletin preparer) for distribution at the correct times.

INVOLVE OTHERS

• Share the worship resources with your pastor/worship leaders.
• Ask that the theme of the worship service on the offering date be connected to the offering. Worship resources in this guide and on the website can help.
• Set dates leading up to the offering for the Mission Moments (pg #8), the Offering Reminder (pg #8), and/or an Artistic Interpretation (online at www.weekofcompassion.org/special-offering/).
• Set a challenging goal for the offering with the leadership team. Consider increasing giving by a certain percentage over last year, or increasing the number of giving units.
• Share the children and youth activities with Christian Education and youth group leaders. Ask that they be used during the weeks before the offering date.
• Recruit people to do the following and share with them the written resources they will need to:
  • Offer the Minutes for Mission on several Sundays prior to the offering date.
  • Prepare and present the Offering Reminder and/or an Artistic Interpretation.
  • Prepare and make the offering invitation on the offering date itself.

PERFECT TIMING

The month before the offering date: begin promoting the offering.

• Put the offering date on the church calendar.
• Send the theme introduction and sharing calendar to each household. Will you use the newsletter? A separate mailing? An e-mail?
• Display the offering poster in a prominent place. Consider changing its location each week to keep the message fresh and to reach more people.
• Do the traditional things your congregation associates with the offering—perhaps a potluck presentation on Week of Compassion, prayer time in the Sunday School classes, or reports from the children or youth about the offering-related activities they have done.

Two weeks before the offering date: Share the Minutes for Mission during the worship service. Make sure the offering date is listed among the “upcoming events” in the bulletin.

One week before the offering date: Include the dramatic interpretation in the worship service. Include in the bulletin any written material people should consider as they make decisions about their giving. Place offering envelopes in the pews.

On the offering date: Make sure extra offering envelopes are available. Help the worship leaders in whatever ways they need to make the offering theme an integral and prominent part of the worship service. Talk before the offering collection about how the offering helps us spread God’s love in North America and the wider world. Specifically invite the congregation to give to Week of Compassion. Tell of your intention to increase your gift this year, and encourage others to do so, too. Remind people that needs continue throughout the year.

One and two weeks after the offering date: Report the amount received to date. Did you meet your congregational goal? Invite those who have not yet given to contribute.

At the end of the offering collection period: Report to the congregation the total amount contributed. Celebrate and praise God for the wonderful work the offering will do! Thank the congregation verbally and in writing for giving to Week of Compassion. Encourage your members to sign up for Week of Compassion Updates at www.weekofcompassion.org. Like Week of Compassion on Facebook, and follow Week of Compassion on Twitter.

"In my understanding of solidarity and compassion, it’s not in any way about what I do or what I give others. It’s the interconnections we create with one another, how we support each other.”

You are here.

Just as you did it to the one of least of these who are members of my family, you did it to me.

MATTHEW 25:40

Paul’s letters remind us that as members of the church, we are so closely connected that we can think of ourselves as parts of one body. The New Testament constantly refers to followers of Jesus, not as Christians, but as a family – brothers and sisters.

Many churches live this out when someone is ill, mourning, or facing a crisis. You show up. You are there for your loved ones in need. You show that love in tangible ways, with casseroles and cards, with hugs and spoken words of prayer. These acts let your brothers and sisters in Christ know that you are present with them. They know they are not alone because you are beside them.

Maybe you have been through the diagnosis and treatment, the unimaginable sorrow, and your church -- your family -- has been there to let you know that you are not forgotten in your troubles. When someone you love suffers – all your truest words and most loving actions simply declare: “I am here.” God hears the cries of the poor and one of God’s beloved children suffers, God declares, “I am here.” God is here.

When Jesus tells the parable of the sheep and the goats (Matthew 25:31-40), he reveals to us a mystery. God is most tangibly present in this world where people hunger, thirst, lack adequate clothing and shelter, and are sick or imprisoned. Christ claims as family members people who suffer and says Christ is so present in them that when you feed the hungry, care for the sick, welcome the stranger – you feed, and care for, and welcome Christ.

Not just your fellow Christians, but anyone in need, anywhere in the world -- these are your sisters, your brothers, your children. Their needs might seem different than the person you worship with on Sunday, but your tangible gifts declare the same message: “I am here.” By reaching out to those who suffer from natural disasters, war, or systemic poverty, you let them know that they are not forgotten. Even when the need seems far from here, by acting together as the body of Christ, we are able to be there for these members of Christ’s family.

You show them love with gifts of rice and oil. You are there for these members of Christ’s family.

Many churches live this out when someone is ill, mourning, or imprisoned. Christ claims as family members people who suffer and says Christ is so present in them that when you feed the hungry, care for the sick, welcome the stranger – you feed, and care for, and welcome Christ.

When you feed the hungry, care for the sick, welcome the stranger, your family -- has been there to let you know that you are not forgotten in your troubles. When someone you love suffers – all your truest words and most loving actions simply declare: “I am here.”

You have never failed us yet.

SCRIPTURES

Matthew 25:31-46 (Artistic Interpretation 1, available online, is a dramatic reading using this text)

Psalm 145:18

1 John 3:11-24

CALL TO WORSHIP

To be read by two groups (e.g. adults and children; left and right; choir and congregation)

- ALL: Praise the Lord!

GROUP 1:

GROUP 2:

1: Great are you, Lord, and greatly to be praised
2: Your greatness is unsearchable
3: You are near to all who call on you
4: To all who call on you in truth

ALL: Praise the Lord!

OPENING PRAYER

Sustaining God, we gather to seek your presence. We know that when we call out to you, you are near. You hold us up when we are falling. You are just in all your ways, and kind in all your doings. You have never failed us yet. Saving God, we gather to proclaim your power, knowing that your words are faithful and your deeds are gracious. We stand in awe of your wondrous works. Still-speaking God, we gather to listen for your voice. Speak to us in scripture, song, and silence. Show us the way to love, not just in word and speech, but in truth and action. Show us where you want to lead us. Amen.

PRAYER OF CONFESSION

God of love, you created us to love you and one another. We confess that we have sometimes limited that love to words, and failed to make that love real by our actions. We have failed to recognize Christ in the hungry, the thirsty, the homeless, the naked, the incarcerated and the sick. Too often, we have turned away from your presence, failing to share what we have with our brothers and sisters in need.

Forgive us. Turn our hearts, and guide us to follow in your ways anew.

WORDS OF ASSURANCE

ONE: The Lord is gracious and merciful, slow to anger and abounding in steadfast love.

MANY: The Lord is good to all, and has compassion for all creation.

O God of promises, you remind us again and again that God has given us so many blessings.

God is Here! (CH 280)
Here I Am, Lord (CH 452)
God is Here! (CH 280)

The food we eat
God gives to all creatures their food in due season,
and we want to be where you are.
and far. You are here, God, in the midst of suffering – to be with others as they suffer, our neighbors both near and far. You are here, God, in the midst of suffering – and we want to be where you are.

You, O God, are here with us when we suffer. Empower us
To be with others as they suffer, our neighbors both near and far. You are here, God, in the midst of suffering – and we want to be where you are. Amen.

DEDICATORY PRAYER
Gracious God, in our offering we return to you a portion Of the blessings you have showered upon us. Bless these gifts, that they might bring comfort and food and shelter to those who need it. Bless those who will receive them.
Let them know your love through full bellies, warm clothing, and safe places to sleep. Amen.

DEDICATION & BENEDICTION
We worship God in sanctuaries, in beautiful, holy spaces.
But Christ has told us that if we want to find him in this world, we will seek out the lost, the least of his brothers and sisters – those who are hungry, thirsty, sick, in prison, naked and estranged. May we go forth this day with eyes open to seeing Christ in our world, and may we know God’s love by loving one another.

May we love, not just in word and speech, but in truth and action.

“Christ Has No Body,” Teresa of Avila –
Christ has no body now on earth but yours; no hands but yours; no feet but yours. Yours are the eyes through which the compassion of Christ must look out on the world. Yours are the feet with which He is to go about doing good. Yours are the hands with which He is to bless His people.

Blessing of the elements
Bless, O Lord this bread, and us as we receive it, that we might be the body of Christ, united in love and service.
Bless, O Lord, the cup poured out to draw us in, let it renew in us your covenant of love, and our shared commitment to you. Amen.

When the poor ones who have nothing share with strangers,
when the thirsty water give unto us all,
when the crippled in their weakness strengthen others,
then we know that God still goes that road with us.”

From the hymn, “Cuando el Pobre”
People who have been helped by Week of Compassion frequently comment that “you were here” after the flood, the earthquake, the fire. The shared offering allows the church to show up and be here when people are in need. Because Week of Compassion works with congregations and organizations that are on the ground, with deep roots in affected communities, we can be present quickly—and stay for the long-term. This means that after the news cycle has moved on, you are still here, helping people rebuild their lives.

This is wonderful from the perspective of aid and material development, but what does it have to do with our faith? The theme for the offering, “you are here,” provides multiple possible avenues to explore the connection between human need, our faith, and this shared offering in your sermon.

1) You are here could be the response to a question provoked by tragedy and suffering: “Where are you, God?” Psalm 145:18 echoes the refrain throughout scripture that God is nearby, present with God’s people. As soon as a person calls on God, God is here.

2) Through the lens of Matthew’s parable, You are here answers the question: “Where do we find Christ in the world?” He is here, in those who hunger and thirst.

The parable of the sheep and the goats (Matthew 25:31-46) begins with something of a mixed metaphor—the Son of Man is seated as king on a throne, but acting as a shepherd—separating sheep from goats. This shepherd king divides people based on their response to basic human needs. Both groups are taken by surprise, and ask “when was it, Lord?”

The needs described are anything but metaphorical, and are so basic that we can easily imagine them 2,000 years later—food, water, clothing, welcome, care when sick, visits when in prison. These needs are so basic that we can easily relate to them, because they are our needs, too. We don’t need to look outside our congregations or even our own lives to find examples.

At the core of this passage is the claim that Christ is present in the human needs of this world, so that feeding the hungry is feeding Christ himself. This is a more dramatic claim even than the idea that Christians can show Christ’s love through our deeds of kindness and work for justice. Rather, Christ completely identifies with “the least of these who are members of my family.” When someone is thirsty, Christ is thirsty. When we see a situation of need—Christ is here.

The images of the throne, the king, and the kingdom may be harder to grasp. But in this context, it shows us the kind of glory that is worthy of God’s kingdom. The glory of God is shown when hungry people are fed, strangers are welcomed—wherever human need is met.

The first letter of John poses a pointed question: “How does God’s love abide in anyone who has the world’s goods and sees a brother or sister in need and yet refuses help?” (3:17) The letter writer, like the gospel writer, sees human community as united into one family in Christ. This letter is concerned with the ethical application of love—how love is lived out in life together. The question is followed with an admonishment, “Little children, let us love, not in word or speech, but in truth and action” (3:18). True love, then, is expressed in deeds of generosity, not empty words. It also makes a theological point—when God’s love is here, abiding within you, you will respond generously with your worldly goods.

3) You are here shows the church uniting to respond to those needs—when you, collectively, along with many others, give, it means that the church can be here, in the midst of need even when it is far away. Together, we are able to respond quickly and be here to stay when the needs are long-term. Pooling resources allows our reach to extend much farther into the world than any one person or congregation, to be there sooner and stay for the long haul.

4) You are here addresses the question that each individual has: “Where do I fit in this picture?”—when God’s love abides in us, we are moved to respond with our own material goods to the needs of other members of the human family.

The needs described are anything but metaphorical, and are so basic that we can easily imagine them 2,000 years later—food, water, clothing, welcome, care when sick, visits when in prison. These needs are so basic that we can easily relate to them, because they are our needs, too. We don’t need to look outside our congregations or even our own lives to find examples.

At the core of this passage is the claim that Christ is present in the human needs of this world, so that feeding the hungry is feeding Christ himself. This is a more dramatic claim even than the idea that Christians can show Christ’s love through our deeds of kindness and work for justice. Rather, Christ completely identifies with “the least of these who are members of my family.” When someone is thirsty, Christ is thirsty. When we see a situation of need—Christ is here.

The images of the throne, the king, and the kingdom may be harder to grasp. But in this context, it shows us the kind of glory that is worthy of God’s kingdom. The glory of God is shown when hungry people are fed, strangers are welcomed—wherever human need is met.

The question is followed with an admonishment, “Little children, let us love, not in word or speech, but in truth and action” (3:18). True love, then, is expressed in deeds of generosity, not empty words. It also makes a theological point—when God’s love is here, abiding within you, you will respond generously with your worldly goods.

Have you or someone you know been to countries highlighted on the map? Do the mission moments or other stories illustrate the ways we can be present through our giving to people who are far away?

When have you felt or seen love expressed more powerfully through actions than words?
Try to remember a time when your belly ached. Perhaps it hurt so terribly you wanted to crawl into a ball and cry your pain away. Maybe you felt better when someone brought you your favorite teddy bear and you hugged it tightly. Or maybe your best buddy—a pet dog, cat, or frog, offered a few wet licks to your face or cuddled next to you. Perhaps a loved one brought you some medicine or a supersized cup of warm soup in your Harry Potter themed bowl. Such kind gestures can surely help one feel better.

LET US IMAGINE TOGETHER:

There was once a little girl, who got a very bad tummy ache. As the child lay sick in bed, her grandmother came to check on her. She peeped into the girl’s room, kissed her on the forehead, and covered her with one of her colorful and thick homemade quilts. Then she whispered: “Your grandmamma is here.” The little girl mustered enough strength to crawl into her grandma’s lap as she rocked away in an old, rickety rocking chair. The little girl drifted to sleep listening to her grandma hum softly. Every note hummed was a drop of medicine that echoed with melodies of love. The next morning, the little girl’s tummy still hurt a little—but she felt better because her grandmamma had been there. She felt special, comforted, and cared for. The young girl remembered that she was not alone.

There are many people all around the world aching and in pain. They are crying because they have a great need for help. Some are crying because their tummies hurt from hunger or thirst. Others are crying because they feel all alone. Our scripture today teaches us how to respond to the aches and pains of people around the world when they cry out for help, just as our loved ones respond to our cries when our tummies hurt. We may not know who they are, but they are our brothers and sisters in Christ and we should treat others with the same gentle and loving care as the grandmother in our story. After all, we are each members of God’s family. When a member of our family hurts, we often feel their sadness and pain, too.

We can help make people feel loved, welcomed, and special by being kind and offering to help whenever we can, like we do through the Week of Compassion offering. Week of Compassion provides assistance to families needing food, water, and shelter. It helps children go to school and provides help in a time of need. Can you remember how nice it felt to be snuggled in your grandma’s quilt or to have a warm cup of soup when your tummy hurt? The bible story teaches us that every act of kindness we demonstrate toward others can be felt by God, too. Each time grandma gives her famous bear hug to help you feel better, God is giving and receiving a hug, too! That’s amazing! When someone is hungry and you share your meal, you also share a meal with God. You not only show them that “You are here,” and you also help them know “God’s is here!”

We may not always be able to respond to every cry in the world; but we can do our best to be friendly, welcome old and new friends; and love our sisters and brothers near and far by sharing what we can. The Week of Compassion offering helps us to do just that.

PRAYER: Dear God, when there are cries for someone to help, please help me to care and share. Amen.

TO CONSIDER

- Adapt the story to make it appropriate to your context. You might make the “grandmother” character a dad or grandpa.
- You might stage the story as a skit, puppet show, or pantomime to make it more “real” and engaging.

STORY IMAGES: Grandparent, God’s love, blanket, tummy ache, teddy bear, sharing and friendship. Scriptural Images: Hungry, thirsty, lonely, sick, strangers, God, prayer, encouragement, community.

"COMPASSION asks us to go where it hurts, to enter into the places of pain, to share in brokenness, fear, confusion, and anguish.

COMPASSION challenges us to cry out with those in misery, to mourn with those who are lonely, to weep with those in tears.

COMPASSION requires us to be weak with the weak, vulnerable with the vulnerable, and powerless with the powerless.

COMPASSION means full immersion in the condition of being human."

HENRI J.M. NOUWEN
Objects:
- Cups and a pitcher of water.
- (Recycle bin, if using recyclable cups).

Supplies:
- Cups and a pitcher of water.
- (Recycle bin, if using recyclable cups).

Objectives:
- Children will imagine what it is like to be thirsty and use problem-solving skills to imagine ways to ensure everyone has enough to drink.

Instructions (Part 1):

Read the primary scripture (or just the focal text). Focus on the term “thirsty.”

Ask for examples of what might make someone thirsty (e.g., a long walk, climbing a tree, or helping rake a large yard full of leaves). You might act out these examples. Help the group imagine being “thirsty” after such hard work.

Ask the children who would like a drink by a show of hands. Then invite the children to come forward and receive one of the clear plastic cups, splitting them into two groups as you go.

Once all of the children have their cups, take the pitcher of water and fill up the cups for all of the children in group #1. Remind them not to drink yet. Leave the cups empty for the children in group #2. Invite all of the children to drink their beverage. Remind them to hold onto their cups.

Processing (Part 1):

Ask:
- For those of you with empty cups, how did it feel not being able to drink?
- For those of you with filled cups, how did it feel drinking when others couldn’t?

Say:
- Imagine to yourself—don’t say it out loud! Just think it in your head—how we might help everyone who is thirsty have something to drink.

Instructions (Part 2):

Divide the group into two once again and fill the cups in group #2, again reminding them not to drink yet. Invite the children to share aloud what they imagined and decide together how they will make sure everyone has something to drink. Once everyone has some, invite the children to drink.

Processing (Part 2):

Ask:
- I wonder—how did this time feel different from the first time we passed out the drinks?

Can you think of a story in the world about someone who doesn’t have enough to drink?

Conclude with one of the provided stories about access to water.

In the city of Flint, MI, chemicals caused a mineral called lead to make the water unsafe to drink. People who lived in Flint tried to tell the local government, but were told the water was OK, even though it wasn’t. Many people, especially children, started to get sick, and so people all across the country started to help them. Week of Compassion helped provide clean water for the people of Flint.

After a big storm or disaster—like a hurricane, tornado, or earthquake—people need water. Often, storms damage water systems and pipes so they don’t work. Other times, the water gets filled with mud or trash that makes it unsafe to drink. Week of Compassion partners help provide clean water right after the event, and then they help communities repair their water systems, dig new wells, or filter the unclean water.

At an elementary school in Viet Nam, there was no running water. The closest water was a long walk away, and the water was not always safe to drink because of chemicals that would get in the river. Week of Compassion partners helped the school install water pumps and filters. Now the kids have water to drink, to prepare their lunch, to wash their hands, and to take home with them! It helps them stay healthy so they can learn.

Remind the children that every kind act of sharing is an act demonstrating God’s love, presence and care for every member of the community. Giving to Week of Compassion Offering is one way to share in this important ministry of service to communities in hour of need.
Children's Activity:

SOUP POT PARABLE

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 25:31-46; FOCUS TEXT: Matthew 25:35

Upper Elementary and Middle School

OBJECTIVES

The children will begin to imagine ways they can share and invite others to the table and will explore in story how we rely on one another. The children will be introduced to the Week of Compassion offering and its importance.

SUPPLIES

Printed copies of the story, props or materials to make props for imaginary pots of soup, bowls, serving spoons, eating spoons, tables.

INSTRUCTIONS:

(VARIATION 1)

Gather the group to hear the story. Read it aloud once or twice. Discuss as a group what the important parts of the story are and what the message of the story is.

Split the group into “casts.” Invite them to stage their own versions of the story—they might have someone read the story aloud; the volunteers will act it out, silently.

The Story

There was once a place called Good Hope. Around supper time, the people of Good Hope would imagine their favorite meal with delicious flavors, and aromas. Alas, no matter how much they imagined, their plates were empty.

One person had a drawer full of spoons but no bowl or soup. Another had a nice bowl, but it was empty. Finally, the third neighbor had a pot and ingredients for soup, but no spoon to stir or serve it.

The neighbor with the soup sat down on his stoop and cried, “I don’t even have a spoon to stir and serve my soup. I will surely starve.”

The neighbor with the spoons sat down across the street and said, “I do not have bowl to eat from nor soup to eat. I will surely starve.”

Lastly, the neighbor with the bowl sat down and wept, “I have been staring at my empty bowl all day and my stomach is growing. I will surely starve.”

As the three neighbors sat with their items, with their stomachs growling, a fourth friend arrived. This friend was known all around as someone who was wise and kind. Without a word, she started collecting sticks to build a fire. When the fire was hot, she exclaimed, “Dear neighbors, you will not starve! Come sit with me by this fire, and you will see that we will all have enough to eat.”

The three neighbors came and placed their items one by one before them. The neighbor with the soup pot set it down on the fire, and soon it was bubbling and steaming and smelling so good. The neighbor with the spoons began to stir the bubbling soup. When the soup was ready, the neighbor with the bowls set them down and they filled each one.

Then the neighbor gave one spoon to the neighbor with the pot of soup, one to the neighbor with the bowls, and kept one spoon for her/him self. The three neighbors were so excited! This soup smelled better than any meal they had ever imagined. Just as they prepared to bless their food and eat, the neighbor with the spoons said to the fourth neighbor, “Dear neighbor, come sit with us and eat.”

But the fourth neighbor said, “I do not have a pot of soup; I do not have any bowls, and I do not have any spoons. I do not have anything to contribute to this wonderful meal.” The friends disagreed and one said, “Oh, but you brought the greatest ingredient of all. You taught us the importance of sharing with our neighbors.”

Another friend said, “You brought us together around this fire. We have one more spoon, so you must join us to make the meal complete.”

The fourth neighbor joined the others and together, one and all, they shared a meal.

PROCEEDING

ASK: What were the important ingredients to make the meal complete?

Were there important “ingredients” other than food and dishes?

(If you did variation 1): How was it different hearing the story and performing the story? Can anyone give an example of how the story is true today? (perhaps in their school cafeteria, in a soup kitchen, or at a shelter for refugees)

Where is God in the story?

(If you did variation 1): Reflect on the unique ways the “casts” told the story. If they made interesting artistic choices, talk about them! Remind the group that sometimes people experience homelessness, hunger, inadequate clothing or shelter—sometimes because of disasters like floods or tornadoes, sometimes because their jobs do not pay enough or their crops are not growing, and sometimes because they have to leave their homes because of war or violence.

The Week of Compassion Offering helps us to make space at the table for our neighbors. Our Week of Compassion offerings teach us how to share the resources we are able to give. Even if our offering appears small, it may make a big difference when combined with the gifts of others. We demonstrate God’s love by being hospitable and compassionate in the midst of suffering. When we give to Week of Compassion, we welcome others to the table and we are also welcoming God to the table to share in our meal with us.

Conclude with the focus text or primary scripture.
Neighborhood.

When we think of our neighborhoods, we may think of block parties, garage sales, pool parties and children playing in front lawns. We may even think of homeowners’ associations.

But did you ever think that a neighborhood could save a life?

You made it happen in Haiti.

In a number of small towns in Haiti, your support helped cooperatives. These are groups of neighbors and community members who unite to accomplish together what none of them could do alone. They work on shared services, like improving roads and building bakeries. More importantly, these cooperatives become banking units that give out low-interest loans to members.

Without the cooperatives, families in need have to borrow money from wealthy landowners who charge huge interest rates. Think about the interest rate that you have on your mortgage. Or your car loan. How much is it? In Haiti, some of these rates were as high as 25 percent.

It was one of these low-interest microloans that saved a life.

Marcel is a member of a cooperative called KABM. When his pregnant wife went into labor, the couple traveled to a nearby town for the birth. They couldn’t afford to pay for the medical services, so they were being transferred from place to place without care. Marcel’s wife had complications while she was in labor, and she needed urgent care.

Marcel called KABM, and they gave him a low interest loan to help cover the costs of the care his wife needed. When he was telling this story, Marcel said, “It saved her life, it saved our family, and without her I wouldn’t have been able to care for our kids.”

We’re urged in John’s first letter: “let us love…in truth and action” and by supporting KABM, you did just that by helping ensure that Marcel could obtain the same support that you would want for your own family.

When this family needed help, you were here. You are here when a cooperative builds a new school to empower the next generation. You were here when a vegetable nursery that a cooperative built had to be expanded three times to keep up with its flourishing production. You are with the people in small towns across Haiti’s Northwest Department as THEY build the future that they deserve.

Thanks for being here. Thanks for being a good neighbor.
Think of all of the ways that you have used water so far today. Did you take a shower this morning? Did you flush your toilet? Or wash your hands? When you made breakfast, did you use water? How about when you cleaned up after the meal?

Now imagine walking each morning to gather water for your family, knowing the water you were collecting was unclean and could make the members of your family sick.

Then for several months a year, you wouldn’t have access to water because it was the dry season and your water source had dried up. How would you get by? What parts of your daily routine would you have to abandon? How would you provide water for your family?

Unfortunately, this is a reality for many people around the world.

In a rural community in Cambodia, the only water available was from a shallow, hand-dug well. Each day during the rainy season, a grandmother named Som Bee would walk to the well to collect water for her family. But the water from the well was unclean, sometimes leading to health problems, including diarrhea.

Thanks to your support, the community was able to address the unclean water problem by installing a ring well. The members of the community also received training on how to filter the water, keeping it clean for daily use.

Because of your support, the members of the community now have access to clean water year round, and they are sick less often.

Because of your support, Som uses the clean water for her garden to help her grow tomatoes, pumpkins, spinach, gourds, cucumbers and mushrooms. Of course, her family eats the vegetables, so they now have a healthier diet!

Som’s garden is so bountiful, she is able to sell her vegetables in her local community, earning money to support her family and buy other items that her family needs.

Your support has reached 16 villages in central Cambodia with clean, safe water. You were here with Som and her neighbors as they gathered to build their well with your support. Now, you are with Som each time she leaves her home and only walks a matter of yards to the well. You are here when she waters her gardens and prepares nutritious meals. You are here as her granddaughter grows healthy and strong.

You are here. And the future is bright.

For as long as he can remember, William H. has loved listening to the sound of rain on the roof of his rural South Carolina mobile home. “It’s peaceful,” he said.

But that love was sorely tested when, last October, it rained hard and without a break for more than a week. “The rain was so heavy that water leaked in through all the edges of my home, including the roof and door and window frames. I had towels all around to try to soak up the water,” the 50-year-old homeowner said. He duct-taped cardboard here, there and everywhere to keep the water-saturated, mold-infested, warping, drooping walls and ceilings from falling in.

“They say you can fix anything with duct tape,” he said, “but after a certain point, there was nothing left to stick the duct tape to. It was a mess.” Once the rain stopped, William faced the daunting challenge of recovering with very modest means. He was working as a standing forklift operator, but had to go on medical disability when leg vein problems developed. His wife also is on medical disability. And they have a growing teenaged son.

“We don’t have insurance,” he said, citing annual premiums higher than the book value of their home. And they were declared ineligible for federal disaster assistance - even though he is a U.S. veteran. “I had no choices,” he said - until a FEMA representative referred him to the Disaster Recovery Support Initiative, a joint on-the-ground program of Week of Compassion and Disciples Volunteering in partnership with the disaster ministries of the United Church of Christ and Church of the Brethren.

“The organization said it would come help me,” William said. “Volunteers assessed the damage and did the paperwork. A few gentlemen came out before Memorial Day and staged supplies at the end of my home. The first volunteer work crew came the following week.”

William remarked at the unselfishness of the volunteers who have come from other states - Missouri, West Virginia, Florida - to spend a week at a time “to help someone they didn’t even know. I feel blessed that people are taking their time to help me. I could not do this on my own. One lady came here from Virginia. She works a full-time job. She took a week’s vacation to come help. I said, ‘Ma’am, you are on vacation and you are here?’ She said, ‘Yes, I like to help people and to learn how to do new things. I couldn’t think of anything better to do! That means everything to me,’ he said. “When the woman told me that, a tear came to my eye. She came to do hot, sweaty, dirty work and had never met me in her life. She left Friday and was going back to her full-time job on Monday.”

Volunteers repaired and tarred the roof, which has proved to be an effective barrier against downpours. “I still love to hear rain on the roof, so long as it’s not for eight days straight,” William commented. Inside the home, soggy ceilings have been torn out and replaced, as have been the kitchen floor and sections of sheetrock. It’s not easy living in a construction zone and constantly fighting dust, but William said he is grateful the family is able to stay in the home. “Especially with our health issues, no way could we have continued to live in here, especially with the mold. We could have ended up homeless.”

William is here, in his home, thanks to your generosity.

Thank you for being here for him.

Mission MOMENTS

Make a tear drop/map pin out of colorful paper using the instructions below.

INSTRUCTIONS:
Fold a sheet of paper in half. Cut as shown. Align the sides of two pieces and glue them together. Keep gluing more pieces until it is as full as you like.

Use it as a prop with the provided script during announcements, in adult Bible study or Sunday school classes, or at fellowship hour.

Make copies of the instructions and various paper sizes available for people to make their own tear drops/map pins as tangible reminders for the offering.

SCRIPT:

Hold the visual like a tear drop
Hold the visual like a map pin

In West Timor, a father is crying because his child is hungry...
Through the Week of Compassion offering, YOU ARE HERE for that father with emergency food supplies and crop storage techniques.

In West Virginia, a family is crying because their home is flooded...
Through the Week of Compassion offering, YOU ARE HERE for that family with support to rebuild their home.

In Greece, a young woman is crying because she is fleeing from war, but borders are closed...
Through Week of Compassion offering, YOU ARE HERE for her with medical and hygiene supplies and advocacy for her future.

In times of human suffering and need, YOU ARE HERE

Our congregation will receive the Week of Compassion offering on _____________. You can give [in the regular offering using the special envelopes, by writing in the memo line of the check, or in the coin boxes, etc.].
